NORMAN FOERSTER, A. B. Harvard, M. A. Wisconsin, Doctor of Letters, University of the South, and Grinnell College; long a member of the Faculty of this University, and from 1930 until his retirement Director of the School of Letters of the State University of Iowa, he has earned an international reputation as a critic and interpreter of American Literature. Author and editor of more than a dozen volumes in his chosen field, he stands preeminent as the spokesman of the humanistic approach to literary study. He is a living representative of the Emersonian American Scholar, whose life and works embody the ideas so challengingly stated more than a century ago in the ringing Phi Beta Kappa address of the Sage of Concord.

By vote of the Faculty and the Trustees of the University of North Carolina we confer upon you the degree of Doctor of Letters.
