

GEORGE WATTS HILL

George Watts Hill has been a trustee of this University since 1955, giving unstintingly of his time and talents to support the just and varied purposes and responsibilities of education, learning, and public service. After the years here as an undergraduate and student in the Law School he entered upon a notable career. He is now chairman of the Boards of the Central Carolina Bank and Trust Company and of the Home Security Life Insurance Company. Over and beyond these commitments, he generously and ably serves as Secretary of the Foundation and as Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Research Triangle, an enterprise rich in significance for our State and region, of which he was one of the far-sighted creators. His benefactions to this University are many. The University of North Carolina is pleased to honor this distinguished alumnus and friend, conferring on him the degree of Doctor of Laws.
