

SIDNEY WALFER MARTIN, President of Emory University, historian, and administrator, has constantly striven for the improvement of higher education in the South, and has immeasurably strengthened the ties binding our two universities. From Emory have come to us graduate students of promise, and to Emory have gone alumni of this institution to assume high executive posts.

The University of North Carolina is therefore delighted to bestow on this forward-looking alumnus who has achieved a position of honor and responsibility in the South, the degree of Doctor of Laws.
